New Delhi, the 12th January 1964

Memorandum on the probable amount of rain and snow in Northwest India in January, February and March 1964

It is possible in some years to form a rough estimate of the probable amount of Winter Precipitation in Northwest India during January to March (with the exception of March rainfall in Uttar Pradesh), from certain antecedent atmospheric conditions in different parts of the globe. The factors which act as guides in this matter are, in the order of decreasing reliability, the following :—

- (1) Mean pressure in December in South America,
- (2) December rain at Port Blair,
- (3) The westerly component of the upper winds over northern India at a height of 5 to 8 kms. (September second half and October first half).
- (4) December rain at Quetta.

2. Division 'Northwest India'.—In this memorandum 'Northwest India' is taken to consist of Uttar Pradesh, the Punjab (I), Himachal Pradesh, Delhi, Rajasthan and Gujarat.

3. Data.—The relevant data for the present season are :—

- (1) South American pressure—Pressure was 1.2 mb. above normal in December,

(2) December rainfall at Port Blair was in moderate excess,
 (3) The westerly component of the upper winds over Northern India during September-October was stronger than usual.
 (4) Quetta rain in December was moderately in excess.

4. Conclusion.—Out of the four factors which are used in forecasting the Winter Precipitation in Northwest India, this year, South American pressure and High Level winds over Northern India are very favourable while Quetta Rain and Port Blair Rain are slightly unfavourable. The Statistical indications are that the combined rainfall and snowfall in Northwest India during the period January to March 1964 is likely to be either normal or slightly above normal.
